I own her Make Your Place book (and several others) and have been front to back through that one a million times. This little booklet has great symbiosis with her book. The hand written text is so charming and all the illustrations are adorable (just like all her other books!) It is very thin, but contains ALL the information you need to know about making homemade soap! Even includes resources to buy ingredients and some great recipes. It's a favorite on my crafting shelf! 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Not what I was looking for, but OK for its purpose. By Michael I was looking for something that would tell me how to make soap more from scratch, e.g., rendering fat, making lye from wood ashes, and how to combine the two. Probably my fault, not the book's. 3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Simple, Practical Advice. By Patricia Ferdig This booklet is well written and straight forward that shows soap making in a non-scary light! Many times when friends have told me how they go about making their soap I get scared away from trying it out myself because of the chemicals and failures they've told me about. This book breaks it all down and really helps you see that it is a very realistic goal for anyone to make their own soap with a little bit of time, effort, and small amount of cash. A great read for anyone from middle and high schoolers looking for interesting projects, people wanting to get a little more crafty, or just control what you put on your body.

"A strong case for self-reliance." Riot 77 "I am never, ever, never gonna make soap. I don't even use soap! But if I do get the urge to lather up someday and I want to use my own homemade brand of soapy suds, then I have this informative, easy to follow, entertaining and funny guide to help me through the process AND I won't burn my face off." Reglar Wiglar "What's best about her zine is how clear it is, with charming diagrams that are halfway between visually sublime practical illustrations and phone doodles. Best of all, you really feel like you could make soap." Roctober
